Town hall reactions

The screenshot shows a Microsoft Teams meeting window titled "Q3 Townhall". The main content is a shared slide from VanArsdel. The slide features a bar chart titled "Combined Retail Sales" comparing sales across three categories: Food sales, Non-Coffee Drinks, and Coffee Drinks. The chart shows individual data points for each category and a total for each. The Coffee Drinks category shows the highest sales at 4,799. The slide also includes a navigation menu on the left and a "P101" label at the bottom right. On the right side of the meeting window, there is a video gallery with three participants. The top participant is a woman in a black blazer, the middle is a woman in a pink shirt, and the bottom is a man in a brown jacket with a beard. The bottom participant has several heart and emoji reactions overlaid on their video.

Callback for call queues

- Eligible callers waiting in a call queue can now receive a callback to their phone number when an agent becomes available. Callers become eligible for a callback based on conditions configured by admins such as exceeding a certain wait time, the number of calls in the queue, or the calls-to-agent ratio. Eligible callers will be given the option to request a callback after the music on hold finishes playing, and admins can customize the messaging, key press, and notification email for failed callbacks. Learn more about how to configure callback for call queues here.
